The October 2026 Halloween Shopping Season is Upon Us

Halloween is my favorite holiday.

It's appropriately commercial, and for the right reasons. It's fun. It's celebrated only for itself. Some of the other holidays with deep meaning behind their origins, have been sold to profiteers, not believers.

Those of us who love Halloween love the candy, the parades, and the chills but we love it for all the hidden meanings, the dark and the light, the twisted jokes only people like us find amusing.

And the fact that deep down, we know every day is Halloween.

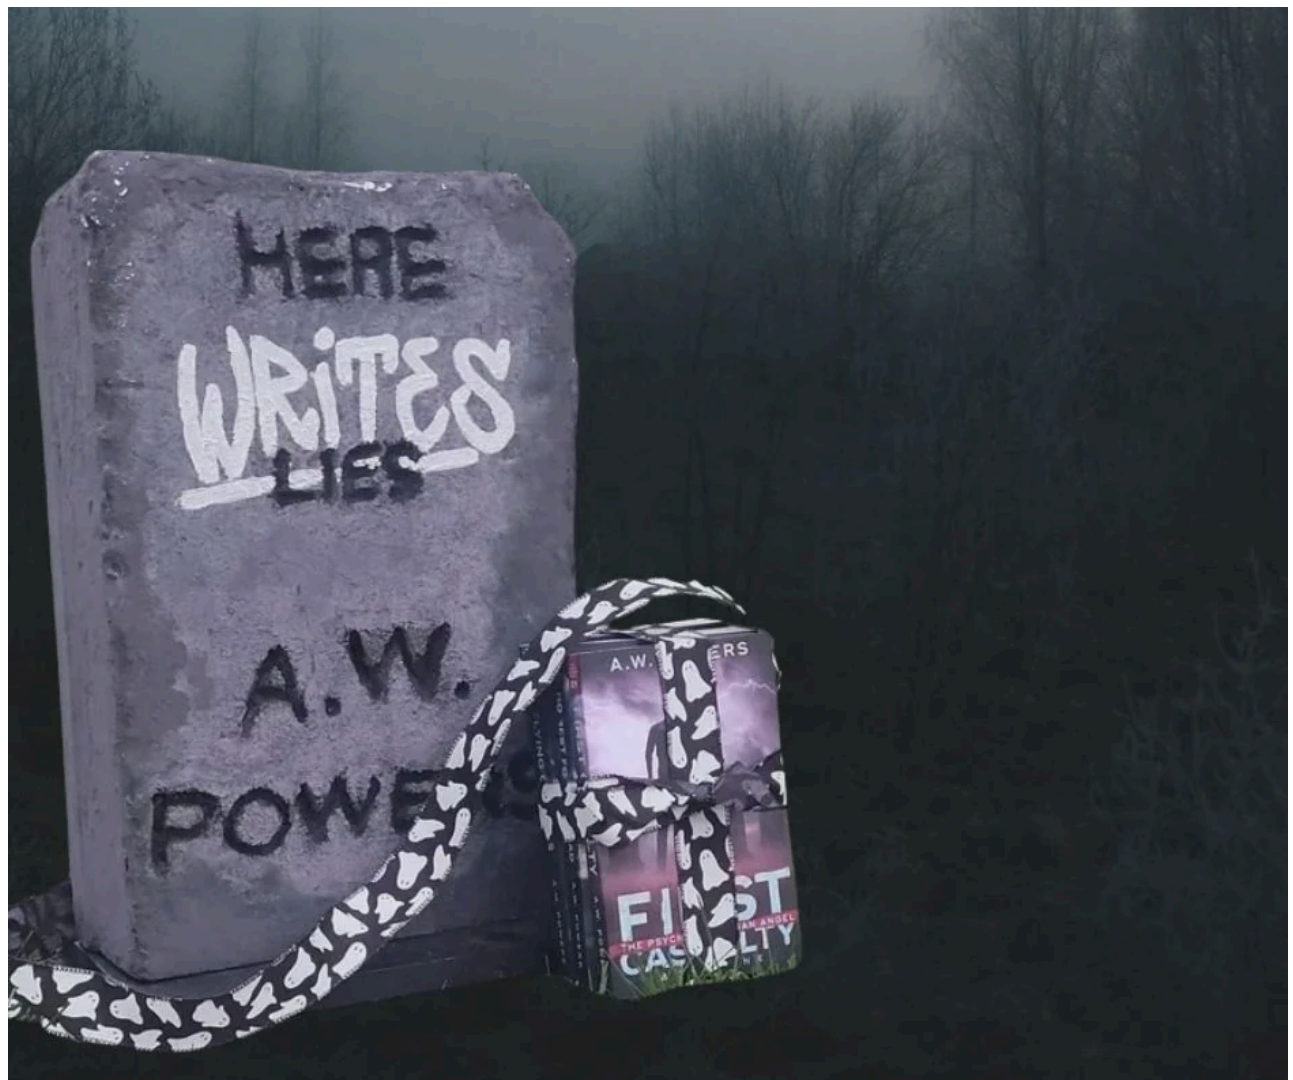

And every day is worth celebrating. Above or below ground.

As always, it arrived early. This year, it accompanied by abnormally warm weather.

Fortunately, some of us remember the 1991 Blizzard, trick or treating with winter coats over costumes, being dragged from house to house on a plastic sled and hoping to survive the season, and can appreciate a warm Halloween, even though the implications are far darker than a horror movie.

But hey, one more thing to celebrate. And the best way is with a lovely Halloween gift.

Don't forgive to give a paranormal thriller to your favorite person. Or your least favorite person. It will make the dark of the night complete.
